What’s in it for you?
If you want to feel like you’ve accomplished something of value at the end of every workday, then Project Management is for you. You will work with extraordinary people, from all backgrounds, with all types of expertise and who are as incredibly focused as you are. You will be recognized for your efforts and well-compensated for your passion and leadership.

A Growing Need
The global need for project managers continues to grow; according to Anderson Economic Group’s 2008 report, there will be 1.2 million yearly job openings in project-oriented occupations. St. Francis College offers an applied multidisciplinary approach to coursework which prepares you for the schedule and budget challenges of the real business world.

Employers seek individuals who have continued their education in order to update their skills. They are looking for people with the ability to work with globally dispersed teams in a challenging economic environment. Experienced Project Managers need to learn new skills such as finance and managing virtual teams.

The St. Francis Certificate program meets the needs of employees and their companies as they strive to increase efficiency and reduce the costs associated with complex projects.
