At St. Francis College, one of the most important ideas we teach our students is that no matter what you decide to do in life, always make sure you leave the world a better place than when you got here. For 46 years, Dr. Francis J. Greene embodied this idea.

Sadly, this past spring was his last one as a full-time Professor of Fine Arts at the College. Dr. Greene certainly made St. Francis College a better place, and I am a better person for having known him. We are fortunate that, as Professor Emeritus, Dr. Greene will still be teaching a class or two each semester even as he pursues his own interests (Page 5).

In this issue, you’ll also meet several current students and alumni who are also fulfilling this ideal. After a rocky beginning at St. Francis, Elizabeth Peralta ’15 has really hit her stride (Page 7). Peralta discovered a love for history and founded a chapter of the Society of Claudel. She and her fellow students now help tutor children in East Harlem.

As an undocumented immigrant, Cesar Vargas ’05 has faced hurdles every step of his academic and professional career (Page 10). He’s turned those obstacles into the Dream Act Coalition and is now on the forefront of the national fight for immigrant rights.

Our 53rd Annual Charter Award Dinner saw the creation of two new scholarships and overall donations of more than $720,000 (Page 6). The Tom Brokaw Veterans Scholarship and a second scholarship named for alumnus Kenneth D. Daly ’88 both point to your amazing faith, generosity, and support of our Franciscan mission.

Liz Mindlin ’81 decided that a scholarship in her brother’s name, The Edward Day Scholarship, was the best way to honor a man who spent his life helping others as a firefighter until he lost his life on 9/11 (Page 11).

Moving to the classroom, we want to thank professors like Alison Dell, who inspired her biology students to compete with vigor in two online, international science contests. She then watched them outperform thousands of others around the world (Page 2).

In athletics, the Terriers brought home two conference championships, in Men’s Soccer and Men’s Water Polo (Page 12). We’re building Terrier Pride across the program with new records being set in almost every sport.

As I walk our halls every day and talk to our students, staff, and faculty, I am so proud of all the good things that are happening here on Remsen Street and I can assure you that the stories you will read in this issue of Terrier are typical ones for our community.

I encourage you to keep checking our website and to follow us on social media to learn about everything that’s going on at St. Francis.

Sincerely,

Brendan J. Dugan ’68

SFC Visits the NYSE

A special honor announced the arrival of the St. Francis College Center for Entrepreneurship as students, alumni, and administrators rang the closing bell at the New York Stock Exchange on Dec. 23, 2013. “Ringing the bell at the Stock Exchange tells the world that you are a productive member of the business community,” said St. Francis College President Brendan J. Dugan ’68. “The fact is our small college in Brooklyn Heights has had two feet firmly planted in this world for decades through our countless, successful alumni.”

The Center for Entrepreneurship plans to be on the leading edge of the burgeoning Brooklyn business community helping to teach, guide, and support new and young businesses while instilling the idea of social entrepreneurship in the next generation of entrepreneurs.

Alumnus Louis Pastina ’79, Executive Vice President of Operations, NYSE U.S. Cash Market, helped arrange the visit and on Feb. 20 came back to St. Francis to offer a lecture on his experiences.

Bio Students Earn Top Scores in International Online Competition

When is a game not just a game? When winning could lead to amazing medical breakthroughs!

Professor Alison Dell introduced her Molecular Biology Class to the online, international competition Phylo. The game’s goal is to figure out ways to match sets of DNA to enhance research into genetic diseases.

“We’ve learned that computers are pretty bad at recognizing DNA similarity,” said Professor Dell. “Humans are much better at seeing patterns.”

By recognizing the patterns, scientists can then focus on specific DNA and look for ways to cure human diseases including heart disease, neurodegeneration, and obesity.

The students were originally assigned the task as a way to earn extra credit on an exam but competition between the students led to some intense time spent on Phylo. They posted about their work on social media and were even in contact via Twitter with a co-founder of Phylo, Jérôme Waldispühl of McGill University in Montreal.

“1 enjoyed helping them to make this experience as smooth as possible,” wrote Waldispühl. “I have been really impressed by the energy they put in this competition.”

During the final week of the competition, Professor Dell’s students held the top seven places against players and researchers from around the world. One student, Alyssa Casciorizzo ’14 climbed all the way up to tenth worldwide, better than tens of thousands of other players.

Casciorizzo, who graduated in the spring, currently works in a doctor’s office, volunteers at Maimonides Medical Center, and wants to be a nurse practitioner.

After Phylo, students then went to work on another online game, EteRNA, which challenges players to make new RNA molecules for real-life synthesis in the lab.

Casciorizzo finished top in the class again, ranking 934 worldwide out of more than 70,000 players.

Entrepreneur Center in Action

When Yolonda Watson ’16 signed up for the Entrepreneurship and Innovation course offered by the Center for Entrepreneurship, she knew she would learn a few things about improving her travel business. But she didn’t know it would lead to getting a $2,000 loan that positions her business to really take off.

One of the guest speakers for the course was a representative from Accion, a nonprofit organization that offers training, resources, and loans to small businesses. Watson immediately followed up with the presenter, applied for and received a $2,000 loan to support her growing business, Destiny Tours & Travel. A Professional Studies major, Watson says she’s already seeing the results.

Yolonda Watson ’16 says the loan has helped her become more efficient. The result? She can handle more and bigger travel bookings for her growing list of clients.
Spring Commencement

St. Francis College celebrated the Class of 2014 at Spring Commencement on May 13th at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Almost 400 students received their degrees with Valedictorian Matthew Delfino ’14 leading the way.

In a spirited and emotional address, Delfino implored his classmates to, “Embrace your own futures. Define your own success and turn your ambitions into reality.” He also urged them to be present in the moment and live a life with passion and purpose.

Delfino, a Political Science Major with a Minor in Philosophy and a perfect 4.0 GPA, will begin working for information technology research and advisory company, Gartner, Inc., as a consultant with their state and local government practice.

This commencement also celebrated the first graduates of the new five-year Master of Arts degree in Applied Psychology.

Winter Commencement

The valedictorian for the January class, Rania Joudeh ’14, was a Math Education major with a perfect 4.0 GPA. Rania transferred to St. Francis from Kingsborough Community College after a fortuitous meeting between her father and St. Francis College President Brendan J. Dugan ’68.

Bro. Owen Sadlier, OSF ’69 received a long, heartfelt ovation upon receiving an Honorary Degree in celebration of his retirement. He taught at St. Francis for 15 years in the Department of Philosophy and Religious Studies and mentored countless students during that time, offering them pieces of his seemingly endless knowledge and boundless kindness. Assistant Dean of Freshman Studies Monica Michalski ’01 delivered the Commencement Address.

New Student Lounge

Students are taking full advantage of a new lounge on the Sixth Floor which features comfortable seating and tables and desks for work. With the completion of the lounge, construction on the floor, which also includes the Eileen C. Dugan Life Sciences Center, is now over. New York State Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver as well as other Brooklyn lawmakers will officially open the Center in June.

DECEMBER 4, 2013

Professor Michele Montecalvo wanted to make her Health Issues class more relevant for her students this semester so she decided to tap into a hot piece of popular culture. She assigned the memoir, Orange is the New Black by Piper Kerman, now a popular Netflix TV series.

“I wanted to highlight some of the social injustices that happen in the health care system,” said Professor Montecalvo.

But the students weren’t satisfied with just reading the memoir. They wanted to hear about it from the author. More than 40 of them sent emails and tweets to Kerman, requesting she come and talk to the class. The letters, which contained personal stories, also related sections of Kerman’s memoir to the Healthy People 2020 Objectives published by the Centers for Disease Control.

To their great surprise, she said yes and visited St. Francis on Dec. 4.

“I didn’t think the power of Twitter, email, and social networks would actually get her here. But it did,” said Joseph Tran ’15, a biology major.

“It was a great experience,” added psychology major Any Chen ’16.

FEBRUARY 6

One of NY1’s most famous news anchors, Pat Kiernan, visited St. Francis to meet with students taking Broadcast News Writing. He told them that in a world where many people now get their information from Facebook and Twitter, it’s vital for traditional newsrooms to set themselves up as curators of the news, giving viewers in-depth coverage of only the most important stories.

FEBRUARY 14

Gadadhara Pandit Dasa, author of Urban Monk — Exploring Karma, Consciousness and the Divine, spoke during Professor Ben Wood’s Religions of India class. He described his journey growing up in a wealthy family detached from his Indian heritage and the family’s loss of everything. This loss led to his discovery of the Hindu sacred text, the Bhagavad-Gita, and his transformation into a monk living on Manhattan’s Lower East Side.

The marking on Gadadhara Pandit Dasa’s forehead represents the footprint of God. “The idea is we’re trying to humble ourselves before God by placing God’s feet on our head.”

Dr. Greene has now completed his 46th and final year as a full time professor at St. Francis. Although his fulltime presence in our halls will be missed, thankfully his new title of Professor Emeritus signals that Dr. Greene is not making a clean break with the College.

In fact, he hopes to teach an Honors course in the fall as well as a cultural-based class. That would be a fitting post considering Dr. Greene co-founded the Honors Program just a few years after taking over the Duns Scotus Honor Society in 1980. He stayed on as a moderator of Duns Scotus until this year.

“With his doors always open, I could turn to Dr. Greene be it for advice, encouragement, or inspiration,” recalls Tamas Toth ’12, a former President of the Duns Scotus Honor Society now studying in Paris. “Even after graduation, he was there as a mentor continuously guiding me and supporting me throughout my graduate school application.”

Dr. Greene plans to use his time now to pursue his passions including the study of 19th century architecture and developing his growing love for gothic work. Recently, Dr. Greene has also found himself as art historian to several churches in Brooklyn. He discovered the origin of the stained glass windows in nearby St. Charles Borromeo and decoded the windows at St. James Basilica, Brooklyn, located between the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges. His work at St. James eventually became a book!

The College owes Dr. Greene a great debt for his other contributions as well, including having served as the Chair of the Department of Foreign Languages, Fine Arts, and International Cultural Studies for 31 years. He helped start the International Studies program and was instrumental in creating the International Business option which mixes foreign language, culture, and arts with business.

“The combination offers cultural literacy to students who want to be in the business world,” he said, a goal that Dr. Greene found vital for success as more and more jobs begin to fall under the umbrella of globalization.

“He opened our eyes to appreciate the most beautiful things in the world and in return we appreciated the knowledge, guidance, and support he gave us,” said Robert Oliva ’04, now Director of Community Partnerships and Special Events at St. Francis.

Dr. Greene also helped re-invigorate the Study Abroad program as its co-director for the past five years with Professor Jennifer Wingate. An alumnus of St. Peter’s College and Rutgers graduate school, Dr. Greene taught for four years before coming across the harbor to Brooklyn.

That makes 50 years at the head of a classroom. But even with a reduced role at St. Francis, Dr. Greene’s impact will live on. The people he’s taught have made huge contributions to St. Francis College and the world beyond.

For example: Bro. William Boslet, OSF ’70 has served as Superior General of the Franciscan Brothers of Brooklyn for a number of years. June McGrisken ’76 is now the Executive Vice President of the College. Michael MacIntyre ’97 is Global Head of Intra Group Services/Wealth Management for HSBC and a member of the Alumni Board of Directors.

“I do a lot of travelling for my job and I credit Dr. Greene for making me a more well-rounded person,” said MacIntyre. “Being able to adapt and adjust to different cultures is an important skill. Almost 20 years later, we still share a bond and talk about the various museums and countries where we’ve both visited.”

Other alumni who studied with Dr. Greene include Carl Quigley ’75 (Assistant Athletic Director), Edmund Greco, Jr. ’79 (President, Midhattan Woodworking Corp.), Joseph Hemway ’84 (President, Alumni Association), Dr. Victor Masi ’89 (Board of Trustees), and Ken Daly ’88 (President National Grid New York, Board of Trustees).

It is not a one-way street. Dr. Greene, in turn, keeps in regular contact with many of his former students and remembers details about them. “I still remember the subject of Ken Daly’s term paper for an honors course — Edward Hopper.”

After 46 years, Dr. Greene has borne witness to an amazing evolution at St. Francis but some things, he says, have stayed the same. “The culture has changed enormously but the students haven’t changed,” said Dr. Greene. “They are still curious, generous, and kind. Idealistic about what we should be doing but uncertain about themselves and in need of encouragement.”

For nearly half a century, Francis J. Greene has inspired thousands, sharing his treasure trove of knowledge with all who knew him at St. Francis College.

The pursuit of knowledge is something to be cherished; sharing that information, an inspiration.
53rd Annual Charter Award Dinner

With the support of one of the biggest names in TV News, Tom Brokaw, and the President of National Grid, NY, Kenneth D. Daly '88, St. Francis College raised more than $720,000 at the 53rd Annual Charter Award Dinner held April 1 at the New York Marriott Marquis.

Both honorees also lent their names and financial support to two scholarships — the Tom Brokaw Veterans Scholarship and the Kenneth D. Daly '88 Scholarship.

WNBC News Anchor David Ushery emceed the evening and created an upbeat and jovial tone for the night. “The enthusiasm of your students and this community really touches me and is extraordinary.”

Mr. Brokaw, the long-time host of “NBC Nightly News with Tom Brokaw,” was unable to attend due to illness but sent along a note saying that St. Francis was “one of America’s premier small institutions in the middle of the hottest borough in the country.”

Mr. Daly graduated from St. Francis in 1988 before beginning his 25-year rise through the ranks of National Grid and its predecessors Brooklyn Union Gas and KeySpan. He said he remembers the day he heard about his scholarship to attend the College, 30 years ago, like it was yesterday. “I was playing sports up at the park with my friends. It was before cell phones and my mom actually ran up to the park and said Bro. George is on the phone and he’s got a scholarship and you gotta get right down there! And here I am today.”

Mr. Daly said this scholarship, which is the second one he established in his name, is meant to give another student the same opportunity he had.

National Grid Business Lecture

Kenneth Daly '88 also announced that National Grid will sponsor a new Business Lecture series at the College. A $50,000 grant spread over five years will help bring a wide range of experts to the College to talk about themes under the umbrella of Business, Science, and Community. Mr. Daly will be the first speaker. He will address the delivery of affordable, reliable, and sustainable energy in the future.

Charter Day

St. Francis College recognized some of Brooklyn’s business and nonprofit leaders as well as its top students, faculty, and staff during the College’s 130th Charter Day convocation on Friday, April 25th.

Carlo A. Scissura, JD, President & CEO of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce was the Keynote Speaker and recipient of the inaugural St. Francis College Entrepreneurship Award. Honorary degrees were awarded to Thomas A. Conniff, JD (Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa) for his years of legal service to St. Francis and Philip F. Stenger (Doctor of Human Letters, Honoris Causa) for his years of service to Brooklyn businesses and organizations. The St. Clare Medal of Service was awarded to Sr. Mary A. Maloney, SFP for her 25 years of service at the CHIPS soup kitchen and shelter in Park Slope.

St. Francis also inducted the newest class of Duns Scotus Honor Society members, and recognized faculty and staff who have served at the College for 15 and 25 years.

Three Accounting and Business Law students, Peter A. Biondo '16, Andy Calixto '15, and David V. Samuel '18 received National Grid Scholarships and Internships. The scholarships were presented by National Grid Director Investment Management Francine Kollydas '96, one of the more than 100 St. Francis alumni who have gone on to work for National Grid.
Today’s Terriers

Elizabeth Peralta ’15 – Finding Her Way

By Meghan Lewit

Like a lot of students, history major Elizabeth Peralta ’15 initially struggled to find her niche. “The first semester was rough. I felt kind of alone,” Peralta said. “And then I met Bro. Greg (Cellini, OSF). He just said, ‘Why aren’t you putting yourself out there? This school is for you, so you just have to go and reach out for it.’ ”

That was a turning point for Peralta. In her freshman year, she started a chapter of the Society of Claudel at St. Francis. The group, which also has chapters at Columbia, New York University and Fordham University, meets once a week to discuss topics of faith and to organize community service projects. Members currently tutor children in East Harlem once a week.

Peralta also heads the History Club at the College, and was a Summer Fellow in the Students and Faculty in the Archives (SAFA) project at the Brooklyn Historical Society.

Peralta came to history through music. She played saxophone in high school, and her music teacher suggested that she explore the history of jazz. Peralta fell in love with jazz — both the music and the story behind it. She felt that the melodies gave voice to the pain and challenges in her own life. The middle of five children, Peralta took over much of the responsibility of caring for her younger siblings when her mother became ill. Peralta lost her mother several months ago, but said her mom will always be a major inspiration.

“My mom was amazing. I’m always impressed by her, even now,” she said. “She never gave up. Every time someone said ‘no’ to her she just worked harder.”

Peralta noted that her mother was also dedicated to public service; she started working for the March of Dimes as a member of the janitorial staff, and eventually worked her way up in the organization.

“ ‘I just thought, ‘If my mom could do this and have five kids, I’m one student and I can definitely do this.’ ”

Although Peralta initially considered law, she quickly changed her focus to history shortly after arriving at St. Francis. History allows her to peel back the layers of people’s lives, she says. As a fellow in the SAFA program last summer, Peralta researched Gabriel Furman, a historian whose journals from the 19th century are housed at the Brooklyn Historical Society. (Editor’s Note: Brooklyn’s Furman Street is named for Gabriel Furman’s father.) Through her work in the archives, Peralta explored the history and changing attitudes towards slavery in New York.

While the three-year grant for the SAFA program has ended, Peralta hopes the College will, in the future, find the means to continue providing similar experiences to students. “ ‘We need more things like that because it’s an opportunity to discover who you are and what you love,’ ” she said.

Her desire to help other students find their way also inspired Peralta to run for and win the election for Student Government President for the next school year. “St. Francis is small enough for everyone to have a voice, but a lot of people don’t know that,” she said. “ ‘What I love about St. Francis is the personalness, and you don’t get that at other schools.’ ”

Assistant Professor of Fine Arts Jennifer Wingate describes Peralta as the ideal student. “ ‘She genuinely enjoys learning and is very open and curious about new subjects,’ ” Wingate said. “ ‘She brings a lot of positive energy to class, along with thoughtful questions and a sense of humor.’ ”

After graduation, Peralta plans to pursue a Ph.D. and hopes to eventually teach at the college level. The strength that she gained from her faith and from the St. Francis community allowed her to open up to everything the College had to offer, she said.

“I know now that if I just sit in the shadows I’ll never get anything done,” she added. “ ‘But when I graduate, I don’t want to forget about this school. It’s the greatest thing that’s ever happened to me, and it’s molding me into the person I’m becoming.’”

Jennifer Wingate

By Meghan Lewit

Jennifer Wingate found her passion at an early age. She discovered art history while still in high school and learned to love looking back in time while moving ahead in her academic work.

"I felt like I was getting away with murder, it seemed too good to be true," said Wingate, an Assistant Professor of Fine Arts at St. Francis College. “Ever since that moment that I realized it existed and combined my interests, I went for it.”

Her first book, Sculpting Doughboys: Memory, Gender, and Taste in America’s World War I Memorials, was published in 2013. Inspired by her research as a postdoctoral fellow at the Smithsonian American Art Museum, Wingate explores the impact of the hundreds of public sculptures of American World War I soldiers — known as “doughboys” — which arose from community efforts in the 1920s. The response to the sculptures at the time highlighted cultural tensions over gender roles as well as the role of art in society, Wingate said.

While the sculptures weren’t endorsed by the art world, the public valued them and community desire created opportunities for women sculptors who wanted to participate in civic art. Some of these sculptures still remain in NYC, although a few have been destroyed or stolen over time.

“People don’t really see them. We walk by them but we don’t see them,” Wingate said. “When you first look at them they don’t seem very extraordinary, but the more you think about them and the more you learn about them, the more interesting they are.”

Wingate, who grew up on Long Island, said she inherited her intellectual curiosity from her mother.

“My mom would get in the car and drive us to NYC and we’d go to a museum or a movie or a concert. She was very influential in that she was always very interested and culturally curious,” Wingate said. “She was a working single mother but she made that effort.”

Wingate received a bachelor’s degree in art history from Williams College in Massachusetts where she interned at the college museum.

While leading groups through the exhibits, she experienced another “Aha!” moment: she realized that she loved discussing and teaching others about art. After graduation, Wingate worked at the Whitney Museum, and followed that with an intensive nine-month internship at the Brooklyn Museum. She went on to pursue her Ph.D. at Stony Brook University, and joined the faculty at St. Francis in 2007. She is also the assistant director of the American Studies program at the College.

Wingate encourages her students to become more active observers of their environment, taking classes to visit monuments, museums, and galleries throughout the city, and participating in a recent three-year grant program enabling SFC classes to study the archives at the Brooklyn Historical Society.

She noted that many students think that creating and curating history is done by others but when they use their cell phones to capture images and post them to social media sites that’s exactly what they’re doing. “It’s a good lesson for the students in how history is made,” she said. “They are participating in making history in this very public, interactive way.”

Her next project is an article on displays of presidential portraits in American homes focused on Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal. She is also developing interdisciplinary classes on the History of Photography and Feminist Performance, Photography and Video, and commemorative practices in art and poetry with English Professor Wendy Galgan.

“Art is one of those things that can inspire awe and wonder. She really helps the students to see what she sees in the art,” Galgan said.

Wingate believes that the intersection of art and history provides a never-ending supply of directions and topics to pursue.

“Teaching what you love, what you’ve been excited about your whole life, you can’t really compare that to anything.”

$50,000 Grant to Support Risk Management Coursework

Spencer Educational Foundation, Inc. has awarded St. Francis College a $50,000 grant to develop new modules that will teach Risk Management to entry level and upper level management and finance students at the College. The grant is funded by RIMS, the Risk Management Society.

“The Foundation, through a generous grant from RIMS, has taken a leadership role in expanding risk management and insurance education,” said Spencer Educational Foundation Chairwoman Peggy Accordino who added that risk management is a vital part of any business plan. “Anyone who is going to start a business needs to learn about risk management.”

The first four modules will help new Management majors learn about basic concepts of insurance and risk management, careers in the field, types of insurance, providers and regulation as well as measuring financial performance. The upper level modules focus on insurance contracts and loss exposures, advanced risk management, life and personal lines insurance, and commercial insurance.

Spencer Educational Foundation Programs Director Angela Sabatino, Management Professor John Dilyard, President Brendan J. Dugan, Spencer Educational Foundation Chairwoman Peggy Accordino, and Dean for Academic Programs and Development Allen Burdowski.
Faculty Notes

Psychology Professor Uwe P. Gielen and Dinesh Sharma from the St. Francis College Institute for International and Cross Cultural Psychology spoke at the New York Academy of Sciences in a presentation entitled Obama as a Global Leader.

Professor Gielen also participated in a joint conference of the Society for Cross Cultural Research and the International Division (52) of the American Psychological Association, in Charleston, SC. Dr. Gielen is a former president of both organizations.

Students from Kathryn Grant’s Theater Production Workshop created The Secrecy Project this spring, which included multi-media performance of three Bertolt Brecht works, The Playwright’s Song, The Jewish Wife, and The Informer as well as original response pieces written and performed by St. Francis students.

The Chair of the Biology and Health Promotions Department Kathleen Nolan and seven students are taking part in the American Eel Monitoring Project with the New York Aquarium and the NYS Department of Environmental Conservation. Dr. Nolan also ran a free 10-week afterschool science program for students from MS 8 and MS 447. Biology Professor Alison Cucco and President of the Chemistry Club Kate Selivanovitch ’14 helped out with the program that uses Brooklyn Bridge Park as a laboratory as well as the College’s new state-of-the-art labs.

Scholar-in-Residence Fred Siegel has received favorable reviews for his new book, The Revolt Against the Masses: How Liberalism Has Undermined the Middle Class (Encounter).

Publications that gave him the thumbs up include the Wall Street Journal, the National Review, and the New York Post.

Communication Arts Professor Michelle Steven brought her class to a recording of Katie Couric. They met with the show’s star, Katie Couric, after the taping and got some good advice on a career in journalism. Professor Steven also brought to campus Victoria Fleary, Director of Interactive for WBLS/Emmis Broadcasting, for one-on-one discussions with Communication Arts students.

“After everything I gained at St. Francis personally and professionally, I can’t think of any better use of my money.”

My heart belongs to the Franciscans—what can I tell you, they practically raised me. I grew up here in Brooklyn and I went to Catholic schools. My brother went to SFC and my mother would bake lasagna for his fraternity brothers on Sundays. When I was looking to complete my college degree—at age 48—it was Brother George, in particular, who encouraged me to come study here at St. Francis. I stayed on, got my masters at LIU, and then began teaching accounting here in 1998 until I married and moved to Florida in 2002.

I truly miss St. Francis. I really loved studying and working there. I’ve taught elsewhere but this was the only college where you could feel the warmth of the place—the professors have a real interest in the students, and the students truly care about their education.

I’m giving to St. Francis because after everything I gained there personally and professionally, I can’t think of any better use of my money.

Through a bequest in her will, Betty Gatto ’94, is leaving a portion of her estate to St. Francis College. She earned both her bachelor’s and master’s from St. Francis and stayed on to teach in the accounting department.

No Dream Too Small

By Danielle Adone ’13

Cesar Vargas ’05 has called New York City his home since his parents illegally brought him to the United States from Mexico when he was five. Raised in Brooklyn, today he lives on Staten Island.

Vargas walked through the doors of St. Francis College with little or no direction after discovering the College at an open house. From the moment he entered 180 Remsen Street he knew it would be the place he would call home for his college years.

Vargas says the College accepted him with open arms whereas many schools in the metropolitan area would not grant him the opportunity for a higher-level education because of his immigration status.

“A small-core community for me was the clincher. I just always loved the small, close connected environment SFC has,” said Vargas. He majored in Philosophy under Professor Sophie Berman whom Vargas considered his most important mentor at the College.

Even with a GPA over 3.7, for Vargas college became more than just a place to study and write papers; the school gave him the encouragement to pursue his dreams and to fight against limits imposed by his life. The late Frank J. Macchiarola ’62 also checked in with Vargas regularly to ensure his time was well spent.

After graduating from SFC in less than four years in 2005, Vargas still did not have legal immigration status. He worked as a waiter for a year while studying for the LSAT with hopes of gaining entrance into law school. A high score enabled Vargas to attend CUNY School of Law.

“I felt like I needed to fight for myself and I was given the opportunity through my advocacy,” he said.

However, Vargas’ first action at Capitol Hill was for a different reason entirely. He had a desire to serve the United States in the military. But again his immigration status prevented him from fulfilling a dream.

His work has brought attention to his situation. Vargas has been featured in The New York Times on multiple occasions with a focus on his congressional work to assist other young immigrants.

Vargas began the Dream Act Coalition where he used his legal education and philosophy skills to help young people discuss and obtain citizenship. “Basically I created my own job, since I couldn’t obtain a job in law after I completed law school,” said Vargas, who is a co-director of the non-profit organization.

He feels many students fear admitting their immigration status. Vargas advises these young people to get connected with their school. “Don’t try to hide. You are only keeping yourself in the shadow. Show that you are not afraid. Know that you are not alone. Our stories are truly not different than many others,” said Vargas.

Vargas finds a deep satisfaction in his current job although he still hopes that, one day, the State Supreme Court will allow him to become a licensed lawyer. Until then Vargas will continue to make SFC proud as an advocate for immigrant rights and as a conduit for other young people to tell their stories.

Editor’s Note: As of this writing, Vargas’ appeal of the State Supreme Court committee’s decision now rests with the State Supreme Court’s appellate division. It has become a test case for whether immigrants in this country illegally can practice law in New York.

The Firefighter Edward Day Memorial Scholarship

By Danielle Adone ’13

When Elizabeth (Liz) Mindlin ’81 decided to return to college to study business management, she found 180 Remsen Street to be the perfect place to call home. Liz, living on Staten Island at the time, knew that the commute would not be easy but the experience was exactly what she needed to get ahead in her career.

Like many professionals, she attended St. Francis part-time, while working full-time on Wall Street. It took a bit longer than most, but Ms. Mindlin, attired in her cap and gown nine years after she began, earned her well-deserved bachelor’s degree.

“I think the small classes were important — I could get to know the professors and they could get to know me,” said Ms. Mindlin. “Although I was a Management major, the broad liberal arts requirements exposed me to things I probably wouldn’t have explored on my own — art, music, philosophy.”

Ms. Mindlin immediately incorporated what she learned from her classes into her professional career. After SFC, she went on to receive her MBA from NYU and recently retired from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

While at the college, Ms. Mindlin had strong support from her family including her brother Eddie Day, a firefighter, and his wife Brigitte. Eddie always joked around saying she was “slow” because it was taking her so long to finish her degree but Liz always knew her brother meant it in a loving and caring way.

Eddie didn’t go to college himself but he always had a strong appetite for learning new things. When it came time to renovate something around the house or fix his motorcycle he would simply read a few books and then gear up to begin a new project.

Sadly, Eddie lost his life on 9/11. He loved his job helping people as a New York City Fireman.

“Eddie was a happy-go-lucky, down-to-earth guy. He was a very caring person and that is one of the reasons he joined the FDNY. He loved his wife and family, he loved his job, he loved the camaraderie with his colleagues and he loved helping people,” said Ms. Mindlin.

Before Eddie passed away, he worked at Engine 28/Ladder 11 on the Lower East Side. Liz recalls that while most people thought Alphabet City was dangerous, Eddie saw the residents for what they were — just people trying to get along each day without the opportunities or luck that many of us enjoyed.

Brigitte and Liz decided to establish a scholarship at St. Francis College to honor Eddie’s memory. “I thought of my experiences at St. Francis and the school’s focus on everyday New Yorkers who are trying to better themselves and their families... It would be a way for Eddie to continue to help people for a long time to come.” — Liz Mindlin

Liz Mindlin ’81 says the down to earth feel at St. Francis is part of why she choose to honor her brother Edward Day at the College.

Men’s Soccer Wins NEC Championship — Earn Berth In NCAA College Cup

It was a championship 15 years in the making, and needed some second half heroics from Kevin Correa ’16, but the Terriers captured the NEC Men’s title with a 3-2 victory over Bryant. Correa was named Tournament MVP as he tied the game twice in the final 45 minutes. Then in overtime, Andy Cormack ’15 scored the golden goal on a free kick to give the fourth-seeded Terriers the victory.

The goal was the third off a set piece for the Terriers, set up when forward Gabriel Bagot ’14 was taken down just outside the left corner of the 18-yard box. Cormack calmly stepped up and hit a laser to the far post that sailed over the outstretched arms of the Bryant keeper and into the upper netting.

The title was the first for the St. Francis (12-5-1) program since 1998 and fifth in school history. The Terriers went on to face Penn State in the opening round of the NCAA College Cup, falling 1-0 against the 16th ranked Nittany Lions.

Following the season, Correa was named a Third Team All-American and head coach Tom Giovatto was named the NSCAA North Atlantic Region Coach of the Year.

NEC Commissioner Noreen Morris with Senior Captain John Johansson ’14, and game winner Andy Cormack ’15.

Kevin Correa’s ’16 outstanding play all season inspired the Men’s Soccer team.
Men’s Basketball Enjoys Most Successful Season in a Dozen Years

For the first time in program history, the St. Francis Brooklyn men’s water polo team qualified for back-to-back NCAA Men’s Water Polo tournaments. The Terriers captured their second consecutive Collegiate Water Polo Association (CWPA) title with a hard-fought 11-9 victory over Princeton. Tournament MVP Igor Mladenovic ’14 led a strong defensive effort stopping eight Princeton shots, while Lazar Komadinic ’15 and Ilija Djuretic ’17 each contributed three goals in the Terriers’ historic win.

The victory earned the Terriers an NCAA play-in game Dec. 5, at Stanford University, where they defeated UC San Diego, the Western Water Polo Association (WWPA) champion, for a berth in the 2013 NCAA Championship Final Four. The Terriers’ defense held UC San Diego to just one goal in the second half while Mladenovic made 10 saves in the contest including a pair of five-meter penalty stops in the first half. Djuretic led the Terriers with a hat trick and his five-meter penalty shot with 6:39 remaining proved to be the winner.

St. Francis Brooklyn went 18-14 and recorded its most wins since the 2001-2002 season. The Terriers tied an NEC record with nine non-conference victories, which included a season-opening overtime triumph at Miami (FL), the program’s first win against a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference. Jalen Cannon ’15 was named a First Team All-Conference selection after pacing the Terriers in scoring (14.9 pg) and rebounding (8.2 pg). Guard Ben Mockford ’14 drilled a career-high 87 treys this season and shot 45 percent from downtown in conference play. He drained a league-high 3.63 per game in NEC contests and finished third all-time at St. Francis with 252 career threes. Point guard Brent Jones ’15 dished a career-high 187 assists this season, which was the second-best single-year total ever at the school. His 432 career assists are third-most in team history. The Terriers finished second in the NEC with 176 blocks, a team-best since joining the NEC. Amdy Fall ’16 (55) and Wayne Martin ’17 (43) were the top-duo in the NEC with 98 combined rejections. Martin was named to the NEC All-Rookie Squad.

Swimming and Diving Teams Rewrite School Record Books

The men’s and women’s swimming and diving squads smashed a total of 14 St. Francis Brooklyn records this season. Diver Taylah Harrison '17 turned in the highlight of the year when she earned the silver medal in the three-meter board at the 2014 NEC Championships. Harrison, who broke the school-mark in the one-meter and three-meter diving events, also grabbed a bronze medal in three-meter diving at the ECAC Championships.

Jessica Reynoso '17 set a new standard in the 100 breaststroke and the 200 individual medley and was also a member of the record-setting 400 and 800 free relay squads. On the men’s side, Jack Volpe '16 established new marks in the one-meter and three-meter diving events. Jakob Christerson '16 broke the 200 individual medley and 200 breaststroke records.

Women’s Bowling Establishes New Program Mark for Single-Season Victories

The bowling team broke a new school record with 76 victories this past season and advanced to the NEC championship match for the first time in program history. Meghan Wing '17 was named to the All-Tournament Team after she posted a .579 strike percentage and filled 91.1 percent of her frames. Her 40 strikes (in 67 attempts) led all NEC bowlers at the tournament. The squad also won the Virginia Union University Invitational in November behind the strong play of All-Tournament selection Wing. Captain Shanna Chepelsky ’14 traveled to Las Vegas to compete in the Team USA Trials with 104 of the nation’s best female bowlers.

Women’s Basketball Sets School Record With 19 Victories

Women’s basketball continued its steady upward climb under second-year head coach John Thurston. The squad set a single season school record with 19 wins and won a program record 10 NEC contests. The Terriers defeated three teams that qualified for the NCAA Tournament; Robert Morris, Army, and Pennsylvania. Junior guard Eilidh Simpson ’15 was named to the Northeast Conference Second Team while guard Leah Fechko ’16 was named to the All-Defensive Team. One of the top scoring guards on the circuit, Simpson finished among the top-ten in scoring (14.5 pg), while ranking second in three-point field goal percentage (38.6 percent), third in free-throw percentage (84.8 percent), and fifth in field goal percentage (45.4 percent). Fechko, who was named to the 2012-13 All-Northeast Conference Rookie Team a year ago, helped anchor a Terrier defense that led the conference in scoring defense (allowing 62.3 pg), field goal percentage defense (38.1 percent), and finished second in three-point field goal percentage defense (29.5 percent). The Twinsburg, OH native finished among the top 10 in free-throw percentage (80 percent) steals (47), and offensive rebounds (77) while being ranked among the top-15 in total rebounding (6.5), assists (2.66), three-point field goal percentage (34.9 percent), and defensive rebounds (112).

Leah Fechko ’16 was a vital piece of the Terrier’s stingy defense.

Eilidh Simpson ’15 came into her own this year, increasing her points per game by five from her sophomore season.

Shanna Chepelsky ’14 helped the squad to a second place finish at the NEC tournament.

Meghan Wing ’17 shows her All-Tournament form.

Jessica Reynoso ’17 now holds four school records.

Taylah Harrison ’17 and Jack Volpe ’16 anchor a young squad of swimmers that will keep getting stronger.

GIVING TO THE ANNUAL FUND IS A REWARD IN ITSELF, BUT NOW YOU AND YOUR CLASSMATES CAN ALSO EARN SOME SERIOUS BRAGGING RIGHTS TOO.

The Office for Development will be offering three awards based on class year participation: The Giving Cup, the All Hands In Trophy, and the All-Star Plaque.

The class with the highest dollar amount donated to the Annual Fund by June 30th will receive the SFC Giving Cup, while the class with the highest number of contributors per class will receive the All Hands In Trophy. The class with the highest participation rate will win the All-Star Plaque.

Don’t see your class? Get in the mix by donating today! The winning classes will be announced in the next Terrier magazine.

Alumni Spotlight

A Celebration of Alumni Couples

In a special salute to Valentine’s Day and the couples who came together at St. Francis College, the Alumni Office featured a series of Terrier sweethearts on the College’s social media channels. If you missed it, here’s another look. Make sure to follow us on Facebook, Twitter, or Instagram.
We Remember

The following alumni and friends of St. Francis College have recently passed away. We pray for the repose of their souls. Requiescant in Pacem.

Dr. Frederick Zugibe

Frederick T. Zugibe ’52, Ph.D., MD passed away on Sept. 6, 2013. In 1969, Dr. Zugibe became Rockland County’s first Chief Medical Examiner, a position he held until he retired 34 years later. He is credited with helping to modernize the profession by creating protocols and techniques for gathering evidence and organ donation. However, Dr. Zugibe is best known for applying his forensic skills to the Shroud of Turin and the death of Jesus Christ. His search for the cause of death led to the books, The Crucifixion of Jesus, a Forensic Inquiry and The Cross and the Shroud: A Medical Examiner Investigates the Crucifixion. Because of his expertise in the subject, Dr. Zugibe later appeared on dozens of TV specials and contributed to documentaries about the Shroud. He was 85.
